Travis Irwin doesn't remember a time when he didn't want to be a lawyer. With a natural ability to quickly analyze and evaluate a substantial amount of data, Travis is well suited for his energy practice. Travis advises energy companies when they are preparing to drill, as well as when they are buying and selling assets. Travis works with his clients to analyze and verify data which allows them to make sound business decisions at the most critical stages of the mineral development process. Travis has experience with large due diligence projects involving oil and gas assets, division order title opinions, curative title actions, limited title summaries, and full title opinions. Travis is passionate about his work and prides himself on his responsiveness, efficiency, and oral advocacy.
