

Government Relations & Lobbying

Overview

Steptoe & Johnson's Government Relations & Lobbying Team understands the critical intersection of business, government, and public policy in an evolving political landscape. Our team works year-round – and around the clock during the legislative session – to address clients' regulatory and legislative concerns. Our attorneys and lobbyists are experienced at helping clients pass legislation that furthers their business interests before state agencies and state legislatures. Our "people first" approach, open communication with policymakers, and regular follow-up allow us to build trusted relationships between our clients and elected officials to create opportunities to resolve business matters legislatively and administratively. This often involves articulating persuasively why legislation is important for the state and industry and how it will impact both.

Our team is results-driven and cost-effective when it comes to handling issues that involve policymakers. We assist clients in advocacy, appropriations, bill drafting, monitoring and lobbying, administrative rulemaking, state government procurement, issue management, strategic planning, and communications. We work to address concerns and cover hundreds of bills each legislative session.
