

Overview

StepToe & Johnson has extensive experience assisting county commissions, municipalities, and utility cooperatives across multiple states in all types of infrastructure projects, including broadband expansion. Team attorneys are brought in early in the project development stage to help develop a broadband strategy, which often includes the exploration of funding options and public-private partnerships.

Representative Experience

- Served as outside general counsel to 14-county consortium focused on the expansion of adequate broadband in central and southern West Virginia
- Negotiated broadband operation and maintenance agreements between local governments and private-sector internet service providers
- Provided counsel to a multi-county rural utility cooperative in developing a broadband utility, leveraging the largest USDA/RUS ReConnect grant ever awarded in West Virginia
- Represented a fiber optic cable non-profit utility that provides high speed broadband access to over 50,000 customers
- Formed non-profits in support of technology-based economic development
- Represented a financial institution in commercial loan structuring and documentation for a rural fiber optic infrastructure construction project
- Advised a rural electric cooperative in the development of a broadband subsidiary
- Provided real estate, right of way, and easement counsel for broadband expansion in rural communities
- Represented an individual owner of a fiber-optic company in the sale of their business
- Advised non-private utility providers in issues related to tax exemption
